Rabbi Josh Franklin

When I'm asked to describe the Jewish Center of the Hamptons, I frequently circle back to the word "unique." Unlike other American synagogues, we have a diverse demographic of full-time residents, snow-birds, weekenders, and even summer-goers among our community. We celebrate Shabbat from Memorial Day through Labor Day on the Beach, and weave the experience of being in the Hamptons into our programs throughout the year. We develop community bonds by sharing experiences both in-person and virtually. We are a spiritual and cultural oasis on the East End of Long Island, bringing Judaism and Jewish life to thousands of people each and every year. Come discover for yourself what makes our community special by engaging in one of our programs, social action events, Shabbat experiences, lectures, and more.

Cantor Debra Stein, Rabbi

Summer 2023 is here, and we can't wait to welcome you to the Jewish Center. This year, we are highlighting some of the newest and most innovative musicians in America, welcoming Noah Aronson and Cantor Rosalie Will. These two musicians have spent their musical lives creating and discovering what is meaningful music in the life of a synagogue. Also, we are going to highlight just a small section of the musical talent we have in our congregation, featuring our Shabbat morning musicians, Peter and Jane, as well as member Lauren Lebowitz. Peter and Jane will give a special jazz concert for us in our sanctuary, and Lauren, along with an extremely talented group of actors and musicians from Manhattan will do a play reading, commemoration of the 80th anniversary of the Warsaw Ghetto uprising.

In addition, we welcome back the Perlman music program and the Ronen foundation for two wonderful concerts.

May our voices and hearts soar with the beautiful sounds of Jewish music as we celebrate Israel and her 75th Birthday.

Seeking Sanctuary with Brad Kolodny

Brad Kolodny

Seeking Sanctuary: 125 Years of Synagogues on Long Island is a comprehensive look at every synagogue building, past and present, in Nassau and Suffolk counties. It took author and photographer Brad Kolodny four years to document synagogues from Great Neck to Montauk and in doing so he traces the history of Long Island's Jewish religious life from 1896 to today.

385 buildings were photographed that currently are, or at one time were used as a Jewish house of worship. This expansive compilation of images depicts the functional and aesthetic variation in American synagogue design and tracks the trajectory of popular styles throughout the 20th century.

Join us for the fascinating journey synagogue architecture takes and how it reflects changes in Jewish community organization and Jewish identity.

On the early morning of April 19th, 1943, a small band of untrained fighters, using homemade bombs and a few smuggled-in weapons, forced Nazi tanks to turn and retreat. poetry and commemoration.*

Tisha B'Av, or the 9th of the month of Av, marks the day that Babylonians destroyed the Temple in Jerusalem (586 BCE), and it has become a day that has also represented the subsequent destructions that have befallen the Jewish people, including the destruction of the 2nd Temple, the expulsion of Jews from Spain, and the Holocaust. On this melancholy evening, we read the sacred book of Lamentations, a poetic description of the destruction of Jerusalem in 586 BCE.

TURNING ASH TO BRICK

A resident of war-torn Gaza, Majd Mashharawi observed the acute need for access to construction material in order to rebuild damaged buildings and infrastructure. She strove to meet this need by founding GreenCake in 2015, a company that creates environmentally friendly bricks from ash and rubble.

In the summer of 2017 she developed SunBox, an affordable solar device that produces energy to alleviate the effects of the energy crisis in Gaza, where access to electricity has been severely restricted, sometimes to less than three hours a day. With SunBox, she was able to provide electricity to hundreds of people; SunBox was awarded a prize in the annual MIT Pan Arab competition. She received her BSc in Civil Engineering from the Islamic University of Gaza. In 2018 she was selected as one of the most creative people in business by Fast Company.

Judaism Beyond Slogans

American Jews use a lot of buzz words to describe their social justice commitments

– tikkun olam, God's image, loving the stranger. What do those terms really mean?

Do they really imply that there is only one point of view on those issues?

A controversial talk, with a healthy dose of nuance.

Rabbi Jeffrey Salkin is the rabbi of Temple Israel in West Palm Beach, Florida, and the author of numerous books on Jewish spirituality and ethics, published by Jewish Lights Publishing and Jewish Publication Society. He was one of the first rabbis to earn the Doctor of Ministry degree from Princeton Theological Seminary. His colleagues have called him "an activist for Jewish ideas," "courageous," "always relevant," and "a rabbi's rabbi." Rabbi Salkin's award-winning blog, "Martini Judaism: for those who want to be shaken and stirred," is published by the Religion News Service.
